Telesphere Announces Microsoft Response Point Certification

One of Only Eight Companies Certified

PHOENIX, AZ (February 27, 2009) – Telesphere® (www.telesphere.com), a nationwide business phone and Internet services provider, announced today that it has achieved certification for Microsoft® Response Point™, an advanced premises based IP phone system designed especially for small businesses with one to 50 employees.

As one of only eight companies listed by Microsoft as a Certified Service Provider for Response Point, Telesphere is able to integrate with Microsoft's phone system and overlay its own feature set through a process called SIP Trunking.

"Small businesses are always looking for ways to upgrade their communications without spending a fortune," said Sanjay Srinivasan, CTO of Telesphere. "Through the Microsoft Response Point PBX phone system, Telesphere is able to give these companies the advanced features and functionality that most large companies enjoy, and at a fraction of the price."

"We're extremely pleased to be one of the few providers to partner with Microsoft in extending such a powerful, affordable service to small business owners," said Clark Peterson, CEO of Telesphere. "The combination of Microsoft's hardware and Telesphere's SIP trunking service will allow small business owners to supercharge their telecommunications to new heights. Accessing this advanced level of service and technology has never been more affordable."

Through the combination of Response Point and Telesphere's services, small businesses are able to communicate more effectively by using features like simultaneous ring, Telesphere Anywhere™, Web click-to-dial, and voicemail to email. Moreover, small businesses can easily scale their communications services as they grow, using Telesphere's hosted model with their Response Point PBX.

"We're excited to roll out this new offering to our partners and resellers throughout the country," added Peterson. "By adding this offering to their portfolio of services, they can reach a whole new set of customers, which is a win-win for Telesphere and our partners alike."
